WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

- Temperatures will begin climbing this weekend through Wednesday next week for Central and Southern California
- Triple digit heat can be expected, however, initial reports indicate favorable overnight temperature recoveries
- An Air Quality Alert has been issued by the San Joaquin Valley Air Pollution Control District due to the South Fork wildfire in Mariposa County and surrounding areas. This will continue to be in effect through 08/29/17.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Dry and breezy over the higher terrain Today with frontal passage

Hot and Dry conditions returning with poor overnight relative humidity (RH) recoveries Saturday-Tuesday

The focus today shifts to wind potential as the passing front grazes the North State. Borderline critical fire weather conditions are expected across the Northwestern Mountains and Northeastern California as the southern tip of the cold front passes in the afternoon. A wind shift from SW to NW is expected along with breezy conditions with winds in the mid-late afternoon, generally in the 10-20 mph range with gusts to around 30 mph.

Afternoon humidities will be in the upper teens to mid 20% range. Friday appears to be another hot and dry day with valley temperatures rising above 100 degrees again with very low humidities expected in the afternoon. Wind flow will be generally light and out of the South.

Looking beyond Friday, the main story will be the heat and low humidity as the thermal ridge rebuilds over the western Great Basin and California. Temperatures will be well above normal. Overnight RH recoveries will be overall poor, generally rising only into the upper 20% range in the mountains, with better recoveries beneath the inversion layer. Expect strong thermal belting at night. Winds will be generally diurnally driven in all areas with the typical upslope (day)/downslope (night) and Sea Breeze (day)/Land Breeze (night). There will be a slight chance for isolated storms in the Modoc on Sunday and east of the Sierra Crest on Monday and Wednesday..

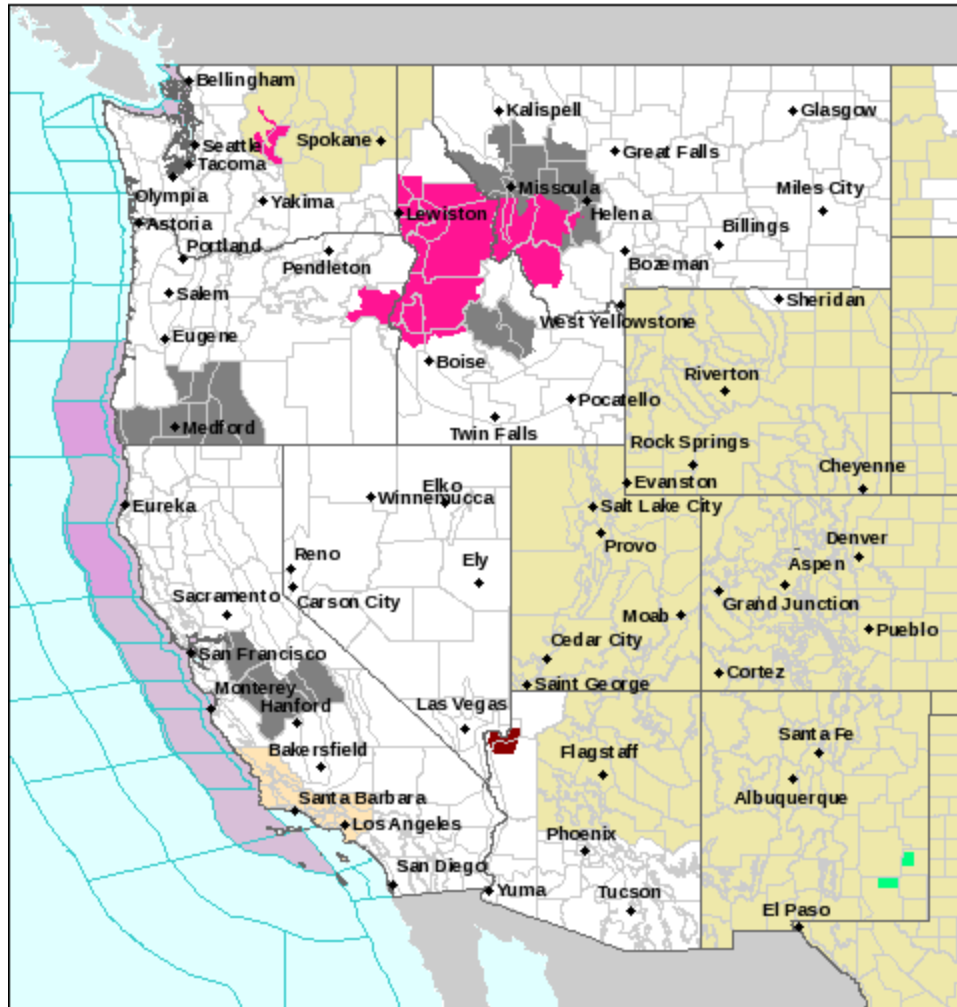

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Hot and Dry Saturday through the middle of next week

The weak area of low pressure that has been spinning off the coast of Point Conception for the last week will move south and spin off the Southern California Coast through Friday. This area of low pressure will bring isolated mainly afternoon showers and thunderstorms to the Sierra Crest and to the deserts bordering Nevada and Arizona through Friday. There will be little change in temperature and humidity today. Maximum temperatures will be in the upper 70s and 80s across the mountains and upper 80s and 90s in the valleys. Minimum humidity will be mainly between 20% and 40%. North winds of 10 to 20 mph with gusts to 35 mph will surface across much of Santa Barbara County and the Grapevine tonight. Temperatures will warm a few degrees and humidity will lower to 15% to 30% Friday as high pressure sets up over the Four Corners Area. High pressure will move to the Great Basin and become strong bringing hot temperatures and low humidity away from the coast Saturday through the middle of next week. During this period, most valley and foothill locations will be above 100 degrees and minimum humidity will be mainly in the teens. Monsoonal moisture may bring isolated afternoon showers and thunderstorms to the mountains and deserts starting early next week.
